To whom it may concern

I first met Jamie in 2000 and we have worked together on a number of productions since then, and he has been willing and able to take on a number of roles for me, including Director, Producer, Post Production Director, Edit Supervisor, Edit & Story Consultant, Co-Writer and even additional Cameraman when required.

His diverse knowledge and experience in the film industry, both in Australia and overseas, makes him a valued 'team player' and someone I can always trust to give me his all.

We were Co-Producers on "Bush Survival", a 2hr documentary special that was sold to Ch7 and most recently NITV, which was about two city girls being taught to survive in the Australian bush by some Aboriginal Australians on Cape York Peninsula. Jamie was also the Director. We had two film crews following the girls on their adventure through some dramatic but often physically challenging terrain and at times the going got tough and the situations intense but throughout the shoot Jamie's positive attitude and calm manner under stress kept the team's spirit high and the final result was a visually stunning production, which we are all proud to have been a part of, including the local Aboriginal community who feel that we represented their traditions and culture in a positive light.

Jamie is a natural visual storyteller and I have no hesitation in recommending him to other Producers and I hope to work with him again myself in the not too distant future.

Sincerely

Norm Wilkinson
CEO/Producer
